NYACK EXPLOSION FATAL TO ONE

And Thirty Are Seriously Hurt as Dye Plant Is Destroyed By Fire And Series of Explosions.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Nyack, N. Y., Jan. 31.—One person is known to have been killed and thirty seriously injured by a series of explosions and a fire which wrecked the plant of the American Analine Dye Products Company here today. Several of the 300 employes in the plant at the time are missing and it is believed the death toll may be increased when the ruins are searched.

The first explosion was followed by fire which practically destroyed the plant. There were 150 men and women in the plant at the time.

The first explosion occurred in the mixing room in the center of the five-story building occupied by the plant, which covers a city block. It is believed to have been caused by the ignition of fumes.

The eastern wall of the plant was blown out and glasses in nearby buildings were broken. The Nyack public school, a short distance from the plant, was rocked by the explosion. There were 1,200 children in the school at the time but none was seriously injured.

Fire apparatus and ambulances were rushed to the scene but the rescue work and efforts to fight the fire were greatly hampered by a series of explosions, every few minutes.

Because it is under the auspices of the Maroon staff it deserves the patronage of all good Kingstonians.

John Evers Lecture Success.

Unable to become a member of the regular fighting forces of the United States, but determined to go overseas to do his bit for Uncle Sam, John J. Evers, the famous baseball baseman, whose name is a synonym for success in the baseball category, has returned from France, where he spent several months as a Knights of Columbus athletic director. He will tell about his experiences at St. Mary's Hall here on February 5th, and those who attend are assured of hearing some of the little human interesting stories connected with the every day life of a soldier that can only be told by one who has been in close contact with the fighters. The day of his arrival in the French capital, September 15th, was the day on which the Germans made their greatest attack on Paris. From that time on Evers saw much of the war, and letters that have been received in this state from boys who met Evers testify to the esteem and respect in which he was held. Evers will be assisted by Mme. O'Ellis, a first class operatic singer. She possesses a sweet voice. Dancing will follow the lecture, music being furnished by Schoenlaw's Jazz Band.

HALF OF ROCKAWAY AIR STATION BURNED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rockaway Beach, L. I., Jan. 31.—Ten of the twenty buildings of the United States air station here were destroyed by a fire of mysterious origin today.

Seven calls for help were sent out by the station and fire companies from all of the nearby Long Island towns responded.

The flames spread so rapidly that the firemen, aided by sailors, were unable to get the fire under control until the wind shifted off-shore. They also were greatly handicapped by the lack of water facilities.

In order to get high pressure streams from which to fight the flames it was necessary to run hose from Bell Harbor, L. I. The Fort Tilden reservation, on which the aid station is located, is supplied by small pipe lines attached to the Bell Harbor mains.

The ten buildings ranged in size from fifty-three to a hundred feet in length. No estimate of the damage has yet been made by the naval officers at the station.

No flying machines were destroyed and no one was injured, according to early reports from the air station.

ULSTER SOCIETY GROWS RAPIDLY

Four Hundred Mark To Be Passed By Time Banquet Is Held At Biltmore On Feb'y 22—This Gathering To Surpass All Others.

Nearly a hundred have already sent in acceptances for the third annual banquet and Victory Dinner of the Ulster County Society at the Biltmore on Saturday evening, February 22, (Washington's Birthday). The menu this year goes one better than last year, and the music will be better. The committee met at luncheon yesterday and perfected plans for the dinner. One of the features in connection with the affair and which is looked forward to by the members is the reception which takes place between 7 and 8, when they gather in groups and talk over the old days. Quite a number of the members this year will invite guests and in this way will have tables reserved. Senator Edmund W. Wakelee will preside and the speakers will be the Hon. William E. Cleary, congresman for the Eighth District, New York, who is well known in Ulster county, particularly in Ellenville, where he formerly resided; Poultney Bigelow of world fame, who resides at Malden-on-the-Hudson; Judge Leonard C. Crouch of Syracuse, who spent his boyhood days in Kingston, and a son of the late H. G. Crouch, for years editor and proprietor of the Kingston Argus; Mayor Palmer Canfield, who will tell of Kingston's and Ulster county's part in the war, and Louis De La Vergne of the American Expeditionary Forces. Members who intend attending the banquet should send in their acceptances without delay, as the number this year is limited to 250. The society will pass the 400 hundred mark by the time the banquet is held, and as new members are coming in almost daily it will not be long before the 500 mark is reached.

DETERMINED EFFORT AT UNIONIZATION

Mrs. Scully, at Thursday Meeting of Kingston Workers, Promised to Stay Until Object Achieved—New York Garment Worker Made Address.

Dissatisfaction among the laboring classes is one of the main causes for Bolshevism, declared Mrs. Mary P. Scully, a general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, of which Samuel Gompers is president, at a meeting held at Cook's Hall on Thursday evening. She has been in Kingston for a month, coming here in an effort to organize the women shop and factory workers, and proposes, as she stated, to remain here if it takes years, until she accomplishes the undertaking and thus aid the workers to get shorter hours and better wages each week. Incidentally, during her remarks about interest to labor in Kingston she likened the title Chamber of Commerce to "Chamber of Crooks."

There were about 300 people, nearly all laboring people, at the meeting, about 40 being women, and all were interested in what the speakers said. William B. Martin, president of the Local Trade and Labor Council, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, presided, and other officers were on the platform. Mr. Martin expressed thanks for being asked to preside and said he considered it a great honor. "Labor," he said, "today is facing one of its most critical stages in a great number of years, and by our stand we will be judged. If we are not organized to demand our equal rights and privileges we will, as in the past, be considered only as the big fellow's tool and classed as second raters. Kingston and other cities in our land are about to awaken from slumber in regard to equal rights for labor, and in this city particularly the women workers are the big thing to consider first. But if you men and women refuse to co-operate with us we might as well stop right where we are now. We will meet with many obstacles in organizing the many branches of industry and it will be no easy task. We should be united and then we will be able to show our real strength." He asked co-operation of owners of shops and factories and employers, in behalf of the Central Trade and Labor Council.

Chairman Martin then introduced Harry Silberman of New York, organizer for the Ladies' Waist and Dress Making Union. He said he has been called an agitator, Nihilist, and searchlist by newspapers, but the only thing he did, he said, was to talk to workers in an endeavor to get money enough for their labor so they could live. He said a concern had started a plant here, coming from New York, employing help at wages ranging here from $7 to $9 a week, while in New York the same concern pays from $18 to $20 a week. Two similar concerns have also come here.

NAT C. GOODWIN DEAD IN NEW YORK

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 31.—Nathaniel C. Goodwin, famous comedian and one of the most picturesque figures on the American stage, died at the Claridge Hotel here today following a physical breakdown which he had suffered while playing in "Why Marry?" at Philadelphia. The end came shortly after five a. m.

With him when he died was Miss Georgia Gardner, who, it was reported at one time, was to become the sixth Mrs. Goodwin. Later it was announced that Miss Gardner had been adopted by the veteran actor.

After illness had compelled him to quit the show in which he was starring, Mr. Goodwin was brought to this city from Philadelphia on Sunday. His condition failed to improve and as a result of the complications of disease a nervous collapse followed.

The serious turn in Mr. Goodwin's condition came shortly after his fifth wife, Miss Margaret Moreland, was married to Lieutenant Raymond Gilson, U. S. A., and on the very day the news of the marriage became public.

Mr. Goodwin for many years was kept in the public eye as much by his domestic affairs as by his stage fame.

That his true condition was not known to the veteran comedian was shown by his often expressed belief that a few days' rest in New York would enable him to rejoin his company.

Mr. Goodwin's health suffered a severe shock several months ago when an attendant gave him chloroform liniment in place of an eye wash by mistake. This made an operation necessary at the New York Eye and Ear Hospital. For a time improvement was noted, but it was not permanent.

Mr. Goodwin, who was sometimes called "The most married man in America," was born in Roxbury, Mass., and was in his sixty-second year. His father and mother are still living there and it is believed the remains will be taken there in a few days for burial. Services will be held in New York first, however.

Two generations of playgoers had known the famous comedian and had laughed at his stage drolleries. While a school boy young Goodwin attained popularity as a mimic.

Goodwin began his business life in a dry goods store as a clerk, but it proved too humdrum and already he was feeling the lure of the stage. He quit the monotony of mercantile life to become general utility man at Niblo's garden, in New York.

From Niblo's garden Goodwin went to the Boston Museum. His first appearance in a pretentious role was at the Providence Opera House with William Henderson in "The Bottle," an old fashioned melodrama. Succumbing to stage fright he fled from the theatre and the next day was found on a train still wearing his make-up wig. Thinking he was too shy to tread the boards, Goodwin then became a clerk in a shoe store.

Subsequently, Stuart engaged him for one of his productions and from then on his rise was rapid. Among the plays in which he starred were: "Little Jack Sheppard," "A Gay Deceiver," "The Nominee," "The Gold Mine," "Nathan Hale," "The Cowboy and the Lady," "In Missouri," "When We Were Twenty-one."

GOODWIN EPIGRAMS

Evolved During His Extensive Marital Experiences.

Nat Goodwin was not afraid to philosophize on the amusing aspects of his many marriages. Some of his epigrams on the marital state have become famous. Here are a few of them:

Marriages are made in heaven—and cancelled in Reno.

If a man steals your wife don't kill him—caution him.

My first wife was an angel; my second a silly woman; my third, a Roman senator; my fourth a pretty thing; my fifth, all woman.

My whole desire has been to prove by repetition that hope can conquer experience.

Goodwin was about to take his sixth wife.

Nat's Five Wives.

Matrimony never lost its fascination for Nat Goodwin, his friends said. His five wives were:

1—Eliza Wethersby.
2—Nellie Pease.
3—Maxine Elliott.
4—Edna Goodrich.
5—Margaret Moreland.

SECRET TREATIES HIT HARD BY NEW PRINCIPLES

Next Troublesome Questions Before Big Five Concern Italy's Claims In Adriatic, French Expansion and Balkan Problem---Conciliatory Spirit In Evidence as Japan Abrogates Secret Pact.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Jan. 31.—With the acceptance of the principles of internationalization for the German Pacific and African colonies, under jurisdiction of the nation best fitted to administer government, the next great question designed to create troublesome discussions in the peace conference include the claims of Italy on the Adriatic, French claims to German territory and the entire Balkan line up.

President Wilson is standing for administration under the league of nations which give the inhabitants of the territory in question considerable charter right to appeal from being unduly exploited.

The American position regarding the Italian claims on the Adriatic, the French claims to German territory and the Balkan claims is the same as that concerning the Pacific islands.

While naturally considerable friction is anticipated it is certain that a conciliatory spirit will be manifested. Progress has been made far better than that appearing on the surface.

Italian insistence that the London compact be forced to the letter has been hit hard by the action of Japan in accepting, in fact, the abrogation of the secret treaty between Great Britain and Japan regarding the islands in the northern Pacific.

The precedent thus established is considered almost certain to abrogate all of the secret treaties entered into since the beginning of the war.

Included in the appropriation voted for by the committee is $169,000,000 for construction, including the building of ten capital ships and ten scout cruisers.

He told of how manufacturers could make up what was lost one year the next year, but the employe could not make up for poor eyesight, ill health, etc., caused by reason of long hours and hard work to earn a living wage at the prices paid, in the garment trade, being mostly piece work. Laboring people can belong to any religious or political party, and no fault is found, but there generally arises fault finding if one joins a union.

Organizer Silberman explained the necessity and benefits of having unions in this city as it improves labor in general as well as business as it causes employers to pay better wages. He said he was in no way a Bolshevik, but a patriotic American, a believer in arbitration, and that the garment workers helped in winning the war by buying many thousands of Liberty Bonds and the girls sewed free for the Red Cross making thousands of articles. He said he would remain here to meet the women workers.

Mrs. Mary P. Scully, the workers' principal speaker, was then introduced. The benefit of organization was her main theme and she told of the results accomplished in the fifteen years she had been one of several women organizers for the American Federation of Labor throughout the United States. "We are going to try to do what we can for the women workers." She told of hard work done among the girl employes in the collar shops of Troy, which city was classed by labor as the Siberia of American.

In the past eight months 6,200 factory girls had been organized. She said she had a picture of 28 men carrying dinner to the women in Troy factories, and now 400 men are working in one factory turning collars. One industry, said Mrs. Scully, is no good for a town. It must have several. The low wages paid to women, if continued, will crowd out the men. Organization is everything. Unionism protects the individual worker. She deplored strikes, and girls should not, while at work, talk organization. Do it during noon hour and after work. Women must not get excited and shout, as they may become inflated like a balloon and burst. Organize and appoint a shop committee to bring up questions before employes and let them discuss it and arbitrate. Mrs. Scully said she had been a garment worker, and had worked in a sweat shop, has been a widow for twenty years, a mother, and knew conditions; had paid rent and had to buy clothes for her children, etc., and could tell the side of the workers. Preachers, school teachers, college professors, bank clerks, mechanical engineers and other professions all had unions, but they called them associations or leagues. They were all unions, nevertheless. No one asked them to organize. They did it because they knew it was a good thing for them to do. Organization among factory workers means better wages and shorter hours, and the latter means better health. Dissatisfaction causes Bolshevism and anarchy. Wages must not come down. The soldier boys when they come home must get their jobs back, taken by women. The soldier boys did not get any of the high wages, but fought for us for $35 to $43 a month and came back with nothing. The American Federation of Labor advocated that they be paid for six months after discharge. They should get it. Labor keeps good times and Kingston should be organized. Put down the slogan heard outside, "Dont go to Kingston, they only pay $7 a week there."

She named some factories which she said came to Kingston because of strikes in places where they were located, and because they could get protection here. Let us organize if we stay six years. Thirty-five per cent of the women spent the best years of their lives in factories. Let the bosses, labor and Chamber of Commerce co-operate. Let it not be an Chamber of Crooks. If Kingston was organized it would be like another city as regards the wage scale and hours of labor. If the Chamber of Commerce thought more of labor and with manufacturers get together, more factories would come here and more stores. The American International Federation of Labor knew of conditions here and low wages paid. It was well aware of danger from strikes and made every effort to bring about a better understanding between parties involved instead of sanctioning strikes. Local unions have nothing to do with New York unions, but are bodies by themselves controlling themselves.

Announcement was made that there would be other meetings held from time to time when representative Federation of Labor men would speak and that a continuous effort would be made to organize the girls.

Thanks were extended to William Kukuk and Grogan & Scherer for loan of chairs and A. H. Cook for free use of hall.

GAS ENGINE KINKS

Of Aid Especially To Unskilled Operator On Farm.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 31.—A gas engine on the farm is a great labor saver or a great time waster, depending upo the skill of the operator. An unskilled man may spend more time and energy in trying to start an engine to pump water or do some other task than would be required to do the work on hand. Often crews of workmen hired to help thrash, bale hay, cut ensilage, etc., draw full wages for hours spent in idleness, owing to inefficient handling of the engine. Such delays are preventable, for engine trouble is usually due to the operator's ignorance of some of the details essential to proficient operation. Knowledge of the engine, then, is one way to conserve farm labor and avoid trouble.

To supply such knowledge the United States Department of Agriculture has recently published Farmers' Bulletin 1013, "Practical Hints on Running a Gas Engine." The aim of the bulletin is to call attention to some of the common causes of engine trouble, to suggest a method of locating quickly the seat of the trouble when an engine fails to run as it should, and to offer a sort of reminder in the form of a condensed trouble chart, which may frequently be of assistance even to experienced engine operators.

Stop, think—then follow a definite system to locate the trouble, advises the bulletin. It gives directions for tesing the ignition system, fuel system and compression, also points on starting and operation, and gives suggestions which will aid in starting the engine in cold weather. Particular emphasis is laid on the importance of a thorough knowledge of the gas engine. A copy may be secured, so long as the supply lasts, by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

BETTY BREWSTER BAILED

After Jurors Have Disagreed in Herrman Blackmail Case.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 31.—Alternately smiling and weeping, Mrs. Betty Inch, formerly known to vaudeville fans as Betty Brewster, was admitted to $5,000 bail here today following the disagreement of the jury which heard the charge of extortion preferred against her by Eugene P. Herrman, wealthy motor truck manufacturer.

The pretty blue-eyed "woman of mystery," who is said to be the daughter of an Albany, N. Y., politician, played solitaire last night while waiting for the jury to announce a verdict. Suddenly she cut the cards and turned the queen of hearts.

"This is my lucky card," she exclaimed. "I should worry now. It means there will be no conviction."

A few hours later the jury reported its disagreement.

Mrs. Inch was arrested on June 13, 1918. On the previous day, according to testimony at the trial, Mrs. Herrman received a telephone call from a woman who said she was May Hayes. The woman asked Mrs. Herrman if she wanted evidence for a divorce. Mrs. Herrman called her husband to the telephone. Both claim that the woman said Herrman had two girls in his apartment while Mrs. Herrman was at Atlantic City.

It was also testified that Herrman was called at his office the next day by the same voice, but this time the woman said she was a friend of "May Hayes," to whom she had advanced $200 for an operation. The woman asked Hermann to meet her at a local hotel and refund the money.

Herrman called at the hotel, after having two detectives concealed there in advance, and was met by Mrs. Inch to whom he gave $215 in marked bills. Then she was arrested.

SHARE GARDEN KNOWLEDGE

Experienced Workers Can Help Less Skilled Neighbors.

The experienced gardeners of a neighborhood will find profit as well as pleasure in the formation of a local garden club, think the vegetable gardening workers of the New York State College of Agriculture. The meetings can be conducted on the basis of "testimony meetings" to the advantage of all. Many valuable hints for local application can thus be obtained that can not be found in books or papers on gardening.

In these times when food production is being stressed, experienced gardeners in every community will feel it is not only a privilege but a duty to pass on the results of garden experience when such experience may save another from error or increase his chances of success.

The college workers suggest that standard varieties be planted only in sufficient quantity to supply the table and to meet the home canning and drying requirements.

MOHAWK'S HEIGHTS.

Mohawk'sHeights, Jan. 29.—A few trees were blown down during the heavy wind storm of last week.

Owing to illness, there were not many guests at the birthday party of Abram Smith on Tuesday evening last. Those who were present spent a very enjoyable evening, however.

Anderson Van Etten spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William DeWitt.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Brandon and baby of Rifton spent Sunday with Mrs. Harold Meneheme.

There was no preaching service at the Reformed Church Sunday afternoon. The Rev. Mr. Meade officiated at a funeral at that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McNair of Accord spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Green.

Samuel Levine has returned from the city.

We understand that we are soon to have a new mail carrier on this route, making the third in nine and a half since John Geary left us.

WHEN MAKING OUT A CHECK

Take Time Enough to Write Legibly and Be Sure Amount Is Indicated Clearly in Writing.

Do you know how to write a check so that it cannot be successfully tampered with? Experts declare that carelessness in that small matter is responsible for the loss of millions of dollars annually, the loss falling sometimes on the individual and sometimes on the bank. There are mechanical devices to prevent the raising of checks, but their use is not general, partly because of the expense, but more particularly, probably, because it adds one more to the multitude of things to be done.

For those who are daily taking chances William G. Fennelly, handwriting expert in a recent letter, offers some valuable advice in the drawing of checks. His first suggestion is to take enough time for the process to be sure of doing a good job. In filling in the space for the amount in numerals, write in legible figures, beginning close to the printed dollar mark; don't leave space for the insertion of another figure. Then write the amount in words, preferably beginning with a capital, at the left-hand end of the line; don't write it so that the amount stands in the middle of the line; having written the amount properly, draw a heavy line from the last letter to the word "Dollars" at the right. As he says, "block the words in" so that additions cannot be easily made either at the beginning or at the end. When the words are written clearly and with an initial of unmistakable identity, the check-raiser has little opportunity for his work.

Another safeguard Mr. Fennelly suggests is the writing of the amount of the check, either in figures or words, in red ink, above or within the signature at the bottom. In his experience he has found this to be a successful safeguard against fraud. But the all-important things are legibility of handwriting and proper location of the written amounts. Don't be in a hurry in writing a check. It is a haste that makes trouble.—Columbus Dispatch.

LIKE OTHER ORIENTAL TOWNS

Joppa Since Earliest History Has Been More or Less the Plaything of Conquerors.

In the tribute lists of Thothmes III, king of Egypt, who held his court on the banks of the Nile, some 1500 years before the Christian era, there figured the town of Joppa. Thothmes III was a mighty warrior. He fought no fewer than seventeen successful campaigns in Syria, twice captured Kadesh and was one of the greatest builders and administrators Egypt had ever known. So, although nothing is certain about the matter, he probably captured Joppa and laid tribute on the inhabitants, who then, as today, built their houses over the "rounded hillock" which, from the sea, forms a gracious landmark. That was 3,400 years ago, and every now and again during all those centuries, the old city, which looks out over the Mediterranean toward the coast of Africa, away beyond Egypt, has stepped into and out of the history of the world.

On Marrying Aviators.

It is noticed that the dear girls are marrying aviation lieutenants more than any other class of soldiers. This is not because so many of them are killed, but because the service is the most romantic, and if there is anything a well-balanced girl likes more than anything else it is romance. And to have a husband who sails the blue skies and goes riding in the clouds makes a girl very proud. She has a right to be. He is looked upon as a superman who gets beyond the domain of gravitation and wanders to the regions where the angels are supposed to fly. When such a one gets back to earth and sits with his wife before the cordial fireplace, and talks to her of stars, sunsets and dreams, could there be more delightful company? Who would not be an aviator and face all the perils of aviation for such an experience? No wonder the government has more aviators than it wants. —Ohio State Journal.

Blind Boys on Joy Ride.

A little engineering ingenuity has made dozens of blind and deaf children in Manila happier.

Deaf and blind children are sometimes hard to amuse. A man who fashions some plaything that can make perpetual darkness and silence a little easier to endure adds a jewel to his heavenly crown.

The merry-go-round that has been placed at the disposal of the children in the Deaf and Blind school in Manila is simple enough for the handicapped boys and girls to operate without assistance.

St. Nicolai Party.

One infantry company at the end of several hours' advance found that it had cut off several score of Germans in a wood. The Germans didn't show any fight. Most of them didn't even exhibit enough nerve to come out and surrender. When it came time for the captain to make his periodical report to his battalion P. C. the latter concluded the message he sent back:

"Have about a hundred friendly troops in woods on my right."—Paris Stars and Stripes.

In Memory of French Heroes.

It is believed that with the close of the war the entire line of trenches in France, extending from Alsace to the Belgian border, may be converted into a sort of national sacred forest as a permanent tribute to the memory of the French "Poilus," who died there defending their native soil. A proposition to this effect has been proposed by the general council of the department of the Meuse and will be submitted to not only France, but the entire world.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Unusual Paragraphs From The Day's News.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 31.—Magistrate Sharp's warm heart laid him up with a cold today. Leaving court he saw a little girl shivering with the cold and scantily clad. He took off his coat placed it around her and caught cold in taking the child home.

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 31.—An unidentified woman, who committed suicide by gas, left a note asking that "no hypocritical mourners follow her to the grave."

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—Ensign Jay Gould, who returned from Russia on the Haverford, calmly sewed a button on his uniform while photographers made the most of their opportunity.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Turn the clock one hour ahead on March 30. Daylight saving goes into effect then.

New York, Jan. 31.—When his salary was small his home life was happy. His prosperity "brought sorrow, disappointment and disagreement," Ernest H. Clarke, broker, declared in answering his wife's plea for alimony. She charges cruel and inhuman treatment. He asserts his wife has become "an habitual drunkard." She is a member of "The Thirteenth Chair" company.

Memorial to Fallen Horses.

In Japan is a tall stone monument erected as a memorial to the horses killed in the Russian-Japanese war. It stands in the public park of the town of Sano in the Tochigi prefecture. A photograph of the townsfolk gathered about it shows the headman of the district attired in a Prince Albert coat. General Viscount Oshima, one of the heroes of the war, wrote the principal inscription, from which it appears that 1,200 horses from the county and vicinity are so remembered.

Real Heart of Paris.

The Place de la Concorde is almost more the heart of Paris than the Place de l'Opera. In it the famous Rue de Rivoli ends and the Champs Elysees begins. It is the true termination of the Grandes Boulevardes, for Parisians consider the Rue Royale as part of that celebrated chain of wide cafe-lined streets. It is one of the most important and by far the most beautiful of the many "places" from which the main streets of Paris radiate.

Uses for Tape.

One of the most convenient agents of the handy box is a roll of adhesive tape. A small piece of it on the bottom of a thin sole will add considerably to the endurance of a pair of shoes. A linen window shade that has started to tear will be prevented from doing so further by a narrow strip of the tape pressed over the tear. A torn bathing cap may be made seaworthy by it.

Like Papa.

The family was at breakfast, and among other things they had hard-boiled eggs. The bald-headed papa turned to his two-year-old child and said: "Elizabeth, how do you wish your egg this morning?" She looked at the egg and then at her father and said: "I des I'll take it bald-headed, papa."

Cleaning Aluminum.

Aluminum articles are very difficult to clean so that they will have a bright appearance. This is particularly the case with matted or frosted ware. To restore the pieces to brilliancy, you should place them for some time in water that has been slightly acidulated with sulphuric acid.

Equally Hard.

In many cases it is as difficult to stay at the top of the ladder as it is to get there.

Trade Commission Responds.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 31.—The demand of the house interstate commerce committee that the federal trade commission divulge the names of witnesses upon whose sworn statements it based its charges that the Big Five packers maintained a combination to fix prices of meats, and with prompt response from Chairman Colver of the commission today. Not only the names of witnesses but a great amount of documentary evidence collected by the commission is said to be placed at the committee's disposal, Colver said.

Flash Seen in Rose Barns.

Fire of an unknown origin completely consumed the large ice house on the Kreiter farm on the plank road last night about 10:30 o'clock. The house was situated on the banks of the Deankill of the Esopus and was owned by Nathan Klein who resides on the old Kreiter place. Although the ice storage housed over 2,000 tons when filled the open winter that has continued was the reason for its emptiness last night. The reflection of the flames was plainly visible against the sky in this city and attracted quite a bit of attention.

Bee Farming Has Future.

It is a fascinating business, that of bee farming, and a business which notwithstanding the fact that it dates back to prehistoric times, is even yet an infant industry. Which is to say, it is not one-fourth developed to the potential limit. There is an immense amount of honey wasted every year because there are not enough bees to gather it.

BIG BROTHER TO THE WORLD

America and its president are embarrassed by the honors and accompanying burdens that in some measure have been invited but in large part being thrust upon them. The Arabs of Hedjas, for example, believe that their fate is in our government's hands. "Even in the farthest part of my country," says their prince, "the word has spread that America is the friend of all oppressed and the enemy of all oppressors, that to her all oppressed may come, sure of finding patient ears to listen and strong arms to uphold the weak if the claims are found to be just." We read that China looks to President Wilson for full restoration of its territorial rights, he being regarded in that country "as the greatest man in history and his decisions are considered irrevocable." Czecho-Slovaks, Jugo Slavs, Armenians and no end of other "small peoples" are appealing to our president to accomplish their redemption. Even the Sinn Feiners and the Bolshiviki are bombarding him with petitions to espouse their cause.

Uncle Sam seems to be acclaimed as the world's one big trusted policeman and President Wilson as the sole judge as to where the correcting club shall descend. It warms us with pardonable pride to think of it, but what in the world are we going to do about it? For every one of the "small peoples" and weak states that are tumbling over each other to put in their petitions wants something that conflicts with the interests of some one of the strong nations, something which at the best will be granted reluctantly, and in most cases is not likely to be yielded at all except at the point of the conquering sword. There's the difficulty—and the deuce of a difficulty it is, altogether apart from the mere tax upon American talents time and money. And if the Big Brother of America should fail to respond, in the revulsion of feeling he will be dubbed a pious fraud. There's no blinking the fact that we are embarrassingly involved.

Congress was asked by the President to give him $100,000,000 to feed about 100,000,000 people in various parts of Europe. When it is remembered that some of the working men of our own country are complaining that they cannot live decently on a wage of $1 an hour we wonder how long $1 will support an individual in Europe. Yet congress gave another of its celebrated acts of straining at a gnat after swallowing many camels by holding up the appropriation for several days while its members talked about things that had nothing to do with the case.

As illustrative of the utter lack of comprehension of the Administration of the industrial needs of the country a prominent Republican senator tells of his observations during a visit to a great manufacturing plant recently. This concern never sought a war contract, but its facilities were commandeered by the Government. After the armistice was signed the production of war materials ceased, and the managers of the plant appealed to the officials at Washington to tell them what to do with the materials that were cluttering up their workshops so that they might return to their peace status. That was nearly eight weeks ago and no decision has been reached up to the present time. The wheels of that industry are paralyzed by the failure of the United States to fix a policy, and, as a result, a great many men are held out of work.

Though the air stratum around our earth has a depth of only about thirty miles, William Marconi contends that the ether extends through vast space and that therefore wireless messages can reach the other planets of our solar system as well as more distant worlds. A London paper recently objected that lack of a common language would prevent successful communication, but Marconi refuses to regard this difficulty as insurmountable and is thus quoted: "One might get through some such message as 2 plus 2 equals 4, and so on repeating it until an answer came back signifying 'Yes,' which would be one word. Mathematics must be the same throughout the physical universe. By sticking to mathematics over a number of years one might come to speech. It is certainly possible." The lack of common language is a less serious difficulty than the probable lack of wireless instruments in Mars or Jupiter to receive the messages and the no less probable lack of scientific men in those planets to wrestle over such communications as might get over.

"I see, Gladys," he remarked, "that the price of coal has gone up again, and that it is hard to get at any price."

"Has it?" responded Gladys, without showing any great concern.

"Yes," answered John Henry, "and they say they are also advancing house rents, while sugar—"

A woman of intellectual tastes found it difficult to remember all the facts she collected. She, therefore, secured the services of a professor of one of the best memory systems. Scarcely had the professor taken his departure after a successful lesson, when a loud knock was heard at the front door.

Her Choice

By GEORGE E. COBB

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

Because he was getting past his prime and worried a good deal about the future of his daughter, Reuben Cole decided that he had solved a troublesome enigma. His health was not of the best, Beulah was motherless and he hoped there would be some way of settling her in life while he was alive.

She had never seemed to care particularly for company of the other sex. Of course there was Barry Lane, a handsome, ambitious young fellow whom Mr. Cole really liked. But Barry had gone to France to fight the battle for freedom, and while her father knew that Beulah corresponded with him he did not consider that there was more than casual friendship between them.

Mr. Cole had an old bachelor friend who lived in the city fifty miles distant. This was Anson Brooks. Twice when he had visited Tipton he had taken a great fancy to Beulah. Indeed, he had spoken of this to Mr. Cole and had intimated that in the near future he would be pleased to pay his addresses to her.

"You remember my friend, Mr. Brooks?" he asked.

"Yes, papa," replied Beulah, "a dull but conceited person who did not impress me very favorably."

"You must not say that," objected her father. "Mr. Brooks is a man of some substance, he has twice filled a public office and, as you have perhaps heard, was one of a committee that went to Paris to look over the Red Cross situation."

"I read about that in the papers," said Beulah, "and I didn't see that there was much excuse for his being with the committee, except to make himself conspicuous."

"You are prejudiced, my dear," adjudged Mr. Cole. "At all events, he has written me that he is coming to Tipton for a few days and intimates that, besides wishing to celebrate his doing his bit for the government, he is anxious to see you."

Beulah looked uncomfortable. "I hope," she said, "that he has not got the idea that I am looking out for a husband."

"I think he is very much interested in you, and I hope you will treat him with consideration."

Beulah said nothing. She was distrait and upset the day that her aged admirer arrived at their home. Beulah had read vast self-approbation in the boasts of Brooks as to his public duties well done, and she felt certain that the mention of his "services" abroad in the city newspapers were puffs.

Anson Brooks threw out his chest and strutted pompously about when a reporter on the local newspaper called at the house. Grandiloquently he dwelt upon his impressions of the war. To hear him talk one would have considered that the destiny of half a dozen nations was affected by his junketing tour abroad.

Beulah was relieved when with evening their distinguished guest left to meet some of his friends at a banquet at the town hotel. After he had gone, her father again pressed the suit of the man he had selected as a safe and indulgent husband for her. Beulah said little. She looked troubled and showed it, and her father left her with the soliloquy:

"She has a good home and loves it, and hates to think of a change, but I am thinking of her permanent good."

Beulah, left to herself, choked down a mysterious sob. Then she laughed. Her emotions ran a vivid gamut, ending in the declaration:

"Well, the truth has got to come at last, I suppose. Papa will storm and scold, but he will soon get over it. No one can long be at odds with Barry—dear, handsome, loving Barry Lane!"

She gave utterance to another laugh as she took up the local newspaper next morning. There was a full column describing the hotel banquet. That was all well enough, but a tipsy compositor or a careless one had made the line "a son of the battle" read "a son of the bottle," and "our war-scarred hero" was transformed into "our war-scared hero."

Mr. Brooks did not put in an appearance at the Cole home that day and Beulah's father looked serious and disturbed all the morning. To an inquiry Beulah made concerning their guest he gruffly replied that Brooks had left for the city.

The truth was known to Beulah before nightfall. The banquet had gone well enough, but afterward Brooks and his companions had started out on a wild race to see who could do the most reckless and foolish things. The friends of Brooks had promptly shipped him back to the city in an attempt to hush up the adventure.

"I think," observed Mr. Cole next day, "that we may consider Mr. Brooks out of the question, Beulah."

"Yes," replied Beulah meekly. "He was that all along, dear old papa. I have a confession to make: Barry and I were married secretly the day he went off to the war."

"Ah! that modifies the situation," observed Mr. Cole, and his forehead wrinkled ominously, but after a moment's thought he added: "Well, Barry is good, but I know I can trust him, so I guess I will have to accept this unexpected son-in-law with good grace."

Strange but True.

You can't find any molasses that tastes like maple sirup, but you can find a lot of maple sirup that tastes like molasses.—Buffalo Enquirer.

GAY GOWNS ARE MUCH IN FAVOR

Flashily Dressed Women Flitter Out Into the Sunshine of Welcome Peace.

SOME STYLES FOR THE SOUTH

Season Affords Especially Good Chance to Show One's Self Off in Right Hues—Influence of Orient May Prevail.

New York.—There is no doubt that the signing of the armistice opened the lid to a box of butterflies, writes a fashion authority. In the form of gayly dressed women, they have fluttered out into the sunshine of peace, and the vivid colorings splash about in social life in a way that enhances the exhilaration of the hour.

No woman is proof against the seduction of alluring clothes. Mind you, there are thousands of women who think they are and who argue, and reason, and protest against this seduction. But it is there. Have you ever known a woman who said that she cared nothing for good-looking clothes and yet spent two hours on her toilet and found several hours a week in which to overlook gowns?

One-piece frock of gray jersey, embroidered in dark-blue wool, with a sash of crepe de chine.

It is foolish to deny the pleasureable impeachment that women care for clothes. Nothing in this world is so unwise as to create illusions about one's self and one's race. There are women who do not carry out their secret desires; there are hundreds who, whenever they try to carry them out make a dismal failure; there are others who, in the press and whirl of activities, have no time to permit their minds to dwell upon what they like in costumery and no time to change their wishes into frocks. But the feeling remains in every woman's heart that she would like to be well dressed, and when she represses with false argument her delight in, and her desire for clothes, it is like seating the little colored boy on the steam valve of the boiler of a Mississippi steamboat.

Mrs. Pankhurst's View.

Cyril Maude, the English actor, expatiated upon this subject at lunch the other day and told two stories to illustrate it. He said that Mrs. Pankhurst said to him: "Mr. Maude, you realize that I am a hard-working woman, don't you? You have a firm belief that no woman has been more strenuously active in the world's activities than I have. And yet, here is my secret desire. I want to be a butterfly. When this war is over, I want to be dressed like a butterfly and flitter to and fro in pleasure."

Mr. Maude went on to say that Mrs. Pankhurst added the last part of it in the most whimsical manner, showing that she was a true woman to the core.

The second story was that no one could realize, in the work of munitions in England, why it was that over a thousand girls applied for work to one factory in a day, while none could be gotten to go to another factory. Upon investigation of the matter, the women, who all spoke out at once, said that it was because the successful munition factory had the most becoming caps in their uniforms. Mr. Maude added that it was necessary to change the caps and costumes in the other places before they could get the women to apply there for work.

So runs human nature. Why try to make out that it is different? It's a very glorious thing, after all, this human nature, and it doesn't hurt us to acknowledge the defects and cracks in it. Who was it said that humanity was far more fascinating and lovable than it was human?

Great Is Power of Love.

If you would gain mankind, the best way is to appear to love them; and the best way of appearing to love them is to love them in reality.—J. Bentham.

WORKED UNDER SHELL FIRE.

But Pioneers Escaped Injury and Now Enjoy German Hospitality.

Mrs Virgil Brooks of 118 Smith avenue, has received the following letter from her brother, Private Frederick Brooks, Co. F, 51st Pioneer Infantry, A. E. F.:

Coblenz, Germany Jan 4, 1919.

Dear Sister and All::

Your letter of December 12 received January 2, 1919. I am well and hope you are all the same. We are doing guard duty and drilling. We drill 5 hours a day. The 51st Pioneers have the honor of being in the Third and Fourth Army Corps They are the troops of occupation. We are a selected troop of three million men. You ought to see the way the people do their work over here in Germany. They drive cows like horses only they don't have a collar on. They do all the pulling with their heads No, sister, I didn't get into a battle. We started for the front on Sunday morning, November 10. We went for a ways and then stopped to wait until Monday. Then we heard that the armistice was signed. All the guns stopped firing at 11 a. m. That was the happiest day we ever saw in the army, although we were in almost as much danger as if we were at the front. We worked under shell fire for three weeks. The shells fell all around us, but didn't happen to hit any of us. I guess it was only our good luck. There were a couple of negroes hit near us. I don't know if they died or not; they took them to the hospital.

Carrie wanted to know if I wore glasses; tell her no. Well, Luzie, I am rooming with a German family, have a good bed to sleep in, but worst of all I have to sleep with a fellow who wants about two-thirds of the bed and likes to live like a pig. I will be glad when I get home and have a whole bed to myself. I think the German people are so good to us all. They seem to want to try and cover up all the wrong they have done. I eat with the family where I stay quite often. If we don't eat with them when they ask us they don't seem to like it.

I don't know just when we will be home. I hope soon, anyway. We haven't any more freedom now than we had during the war. The weather is quite warm over here. The ground hasn't frozen a night yet. It rains every day. I received my Christmas box all O. K. a couple of days before Christmas. The cake and candy were good. Well, I guess I have told you all for this time. Love and best wishes to you all. FRED.

Clover Adds Value to Pastures.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—Perhaps there is no use for sweet clover that gives such promise and that seems of such wide application as its combination with blue grass for pasture, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1005, recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Both crops grow together well, even when there is a perfect stand of each. The sweet clover adds nitrogen to the soil, and where the stand of blue grass is poor this helps it to thicken and produce a much better stand than would be possible without sweet clover. Furthermore, the clover adds greatly to the total amount of pasturage produced and gives a longer pasture. It comes on in the spring two or three weeks earlier than most other grasses and the live stock can be turned to pasture just that much earlier. In some instances this combination has more than doubled the carrying capacity of an acre of blue grass alone. A first class pasture of this kind will easily carry two 1,000 pound steers on an acre in the spring and early summer, and as a usual thing, will carry more than one such steer during the remainder of the pasture season.

WANTS TO COME HOME ON THE "ESOPUS"

Unless He Can Get Sent to Russia And Come Via the Golden Gate—Also Anxious to Salute "Bill"—Proud of Ulster County.

Camp de Souge, France, January 14.—I received your letter of Christmas eve, this evening and decided to answer it right away. It was pretty tough about Marksou, now after everything was over and we all had a feeling that everything was quiet. You say I did not know him perhaps. I did, for he was at work in the office a short time before I left; a quiet sort of a business like fellow. It must have been pretty sad news after all that he had been through and just as his people began to think that he was safe. Dittus, Perry, Gene and "Heinie" I suppose are all O. K. and will soon be returning to the old job; as for me—well I am still down here with the same old bunch of "fighting quartermasters" grinding away and trying to remember that there has been a war somewhere and that it is over, and hoping that all of the fellows who have been doing the real work of exterminating the Hun will be returned safe.

Wants to Say "Sir."

Some time ago I received a letter saying that Bill Gardner was going to the training school. Did he make a second lieutenant? I hope so for it will be so nice to snap into it and say "sir" to him when I see him. Tell him that when I return I shall expect to find him at least a major.

Ulster on the Map.

It was fine that the Red Cross made their campaign a success. I know how such things are in some places, with the people saying, "Well, the war is over and why do they need more?" But I know it was not so at home. The old town has never been called upon yet to do anything but what there was always a grand response and each and every campaign for Y. Red Cross, K. of C., or Liberty Loan has been a success with the old town going "over the top" and placing Ulster county on the map back there just as our boys over here have. Everyone to whom I talk says that the New York boys were there every time. The 27th was a long time getting started but they went on like everyone knew they would once they got started. From what Dittus writes I guess he was there all right and believe me he sure saw something. I am glad that you received the Stars and Stripes with the piece about the 27th Division in it. It was very interesting and goes to prove that they were in at the finish.

Coming Home on the Esopus.

It must be quite a load off Mr. Schoonmaker's mind now that the shipyard has made good and the need of hurry and worry is over. The picture of the Esopus taking the water was very good and in fact it looked so good that I have half a mind to engage my passage home on it. Of course not being much of a sailor I might better stick to the G. W. and avoid being sick but then there is nothing like booming home industry. Are they building any more of the ships or have they closed their contracts for wooden ships?

Or Via the Golden Gate.

I hope I am not sent home as soon as the camp closes for I would like to get up and see a bit of the places where the boys have been changing the map of Europe during the past few months. It won't be so bad down here yet for a month during the winter but then I hope the work of cleaning up will be completed and I get sent to the Rhine or Russia or any old place. I am out to see as much of the country as possible and although I would like to drop in and see the folks for an evening, still I won't object if the want to send me home via Siberia, the Pacific and the Golden Gate. I am over here and I may as well remain a bit longer and see whatever I can for it may be a long time before I return to France.

You mention in one of the letters received recently that some of the fellows from around home had been through Souge in their training. With the exception of Tammany and a couple of others I have seen no one from home here, due perhaps to the fact that during the day when they would be around I am at work and not knowing in what organizations they were I could not visit them. I would like to have met some of the fellows. We have one fellow here who assigned the quarters to troops and he was on the job whenever a new organization came in and he met a bunch of fellows from his home that way. I received your card telling about Delancy DeGraff being in the 16th F. A. but only a couple of days before he left.

A Prophecy Fulfilled.

There was one thing that struck me as very good. I presume other papers had it. That was about the first of November when you came out with a big headline, "The War Will End This Month." Do you remember it? The best part of it was that it came true. In spite of the celebration on the 11th you managed to get out a very creditable sheet, not ideal by far but above the average for a "hick" town paper on such a big day and shorthanded.

Rainbow Before Sunrise.

Today has been the first day we have had without rain since about December 9th, with possibly a day or so while I was away, although it rained every day while I was. Last Sunday I hung out my blankets to air as I thought it was going to be a clear day but before 10 o'clock they were wet and have been so until today. It is warmer than last year but I think more steady rain. For several mornings when I got up I have seen a rainbow in the west, way up high, for the sun has not yet come up. About a week ago I noticed it. It was the first time I ever saw a rainbow before the sun was up. Already we are noticing a lengthening of daylight and are wishing for the long summer days to hasten.

NEW $100 W. S. S.

To be Issued by Treasury Department—$1,000 Limit Holds.

So many people have been buying war savings stamps in quantity that treasury department officials have decided to issue an entirely new type of stamp, valued upon maturity at $100, and it was announced recently by Vernon Munroe, assistant director of government savings in the second federal reserve district. The same regulations preventing any one person from owning more than $1,000 of this popular form of government security are still in effect, however.

"The $100 war saving certificate will cost $82.60 if put on sale durning February, the price increasing twenty cents every succeeding month until the end of the year," said Mr. Munroe, who is in general supervision of the 1919 campaign of the war savings committee in New York and the twelve northern counties of New Jersey. "The new stamps are now on the press and are about the size of a $100 bond of the Fourth Liberty Loan.

"Decision to issue these $100 war savings stamps was reached by officials of the treasury department as the result of suggestions by investors in W. S. S., who said they found it irksome to amass a lot of $5 stamps and paste these upon certificates. They said that, in their opinion, investors of $100 or more at one time should be given equal encouragement as those who purchased 25 cent thrift stamps or $5 W. S. S.

"Heads of households may procure $1,000 worth of W. S. S. for every member, but not more than this amount for each individual during one year. The W. S. S. is really a short term discount bond, which may be converted into cash at the option of the holder, and is thus an excellent form of security for investors who are more or less doubtful as to the future, and feel they cannot afford to tie up their money in other investments. Four per cent interest, compounded quarterly, is paid upon the W. S. S., whether it be a $100 stamp or a $5 stamp, and both types of bond mature within five years of the date of purchase. Furthermore, they increase in value right along, and purchasers need never fear they will be forced to sell under the price paid."

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Summer will surely come again,
The earth needs snow and cold and rain,
Just as our hearts need grief and pain,
And so be cheery!

SWEETS FOR THE YOUNG FOLKS.

There are so many sweets that may be made with little or no sugar that we need not cut the small people off without their ration of sweets, even if we are saving sugar.

Fruit Cakes.—Take three-fourths of a cupful of raisins and one-fourth of a cupful of walnut meats and a few grains of salt. Put the nuts and raisins mixed through the meat grinder. Shape into small flat cakes and wrap in waxed paper.

Chocolate Nut Bars. — Melt six ounces of sweet chocolate over hot water, beat until nearly cool, then add a half-cupful each of chopped raisins and peanuts with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Mix well and press into the top of a tin cracker box. Leave until firm, when it will come out without breaking. Cut in bars and wrap in waxed paper.

Maple Cream.—Take two cupfuls of broken bits of maple sugar, put into a saucepan with three-fourths of a cupful of cream. Boil without stirring until the candy makes a soft ball when dropped in cold water, or to 230 degrees Fahrenheit. Remove from the heat and do not disturb until cool. Stir and beat with a wooden spoon until the candy begins to harden, then turn it into greased tin boxes in which biscuits were purchased. The candy may be left in the box if it is to be sent away, keeping in much better condition than if it were cut and wrapped.

Coconut Macaroons.—Take a can of Eagle brand milk and mix it with grated coconut until thick, drop on buttered sheets and bake in a moderate oven until brown. The milk with the sugared coconut supplies all the sweetening needed. A little grated chocolate added will make chocolate macaroons.

Puffed Rice Jack.—Boil a half cupful of molasses and a tablespoonful of vinegar with a teaspoonful of butter until it hardens in water, then stir in enough puffed rice to cover each with the sirup. Put into a greased dripping pan to cool.

HERE AND THERE ABOUT THE TOWN

The Stroller Hears That Some People Don't Enjoy Life Because They Are Always Worrying and What's the Use.

"Who is your favorite author?" asked the customer as he entered the barber shop for his usual chat.

"I don't find much time to read," replied the barber, "but offhand I would say my dad."

"What does he write?" asked the customer.

"Checks," replied the barber with a grin.

"Think you are witty don't you," said the customer.

"Nope," retorted the barber, "but there is no use getting excited over it, and I might say by the way that if I was like you I would be worrying right now."

"About what?" queried the customer.

"Two months ago," said the barber, "I loaned a fellow a ten spot and last night he called up and said if I stopped at the house on the way home he would pay me."

"That hadn't ought to worry you," said the customer.

"Maybe not," continued the barber, "but when I reached his house I found he had been quarantined for diphtheria."

"There is certainly a lot of sickness around," remarked the customer following a pause.

"No doubt about that," agreed the barber, "but I have found that the best way to enjoy life is to quit worrying about things. There are a lot of people who never get any enjoyment out of life because they are always worrying about something."

"Well you can't help it sometimes," defended the customer.

"That may be true too," agreed the barber, "but you only got one life to live, and you can find enough pleasant things in life to enjoy without losing time worrying about what may never happen."

THE STROLLER.

GRANITE.

Granite, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Mary C. Addis, wife of the late Joseph Addis, deceased, died Thursday noon, January 23d, at the age of 88 years, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Emzy Turner, where she made her home for many years, and has since been a much loved member of the home. She was of a retiring, modest disposition, and was devoted to the home and family, where for so long a time she had been a member. She was a woman of Christian character, and a member of the Reformed church, where she was loved by all who knew her. She is survived by one brother, William Bush, of Eddyville; and two sons, William of Kerhonkson, and Peter of Granite, and four daughters, Mrs. Anna D. Baird, of Passaic, N. J.; Abigail, wife of Jonas Van Wagenen, of Kerhonkson; Nancy, wife of Henry Seldon, of Rikabill, N. J., and Julia, wife of Emzy Turner, of Granite. The funeral was held from the home Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Meade of the Reformed church. Interment was made in the family plot at Pine Bush cemetery.

PRESIDENT'S VISIT

To Soldiers in France Described by Abe Levine.

PRIVATE ABRAHAM LEVINE,
Co. 4, Service Battalion,
Army Schools, A. P. O. 714,
Amer. Ex. F.
Dec. 27th, 1918.

Dear Ben:

Just a few lines to let you know that the old scout is still above board and going strong. There is a difference between pushing a key-board and pushing a gun with a bayonet on the end of it. I have not heard directly from you for some time, but from the letters I get from home it seems that you and Ray and the kiddies are in good health. I am feeling like a two year old and can step along in good time.

It snowed here today but don't compare with what hits your part of the country. Have you had much winter weather up to the present time or has it been mild. I had expectations of spending my winter vacations with you but it seems I will have to postpone same until the spring. And then it is not a sure bet that I will get back in time to enjoy the good meals that Ray has been noted for.

I did not have any intention of writing you about the little doings that took place here previous to the signing of the armistice on account of my expectations mentioned in paragraph above. But since there is no sure thing about getting home in short order it might become necessary to enlighten you a bit as to my travels in "Sunny France." I will not include my recitals in this letter.

Our most honored president paid a visit to this locality on Christmas Day and I was out bright and early to welcome him. I hiked a few kilometers to the parade grounds and fell in line with the rest of the crowd. There were soldiers of all ranks, from the lowest to the highest, and as I am a buck private, number three in the rear rank, I was the rankest. The civilians were dressed up in their holiday best. After waiting a short time planes could be seen in the distance and the waiting crowd knew that our honored visitor was nearing. The leading auto drew up to the walk leading to the reviewing stand. The president stepped out of the machine, and on his face was that smile for which he is well known. With raised hat our honored president stepped gingerly down the duckboards and the crowd just went wild with enthusiam. There was cheering and then some more cheering. The various organizations had lined up so that they could be within earshot of the president. After the men had been spoken to, the various troops repaired to their appointed spot to await the signal for the review. The signal was given and then a spectacle that which I had not seen before took place. It was a wonderful sight. Veteran soldiers every one of them and they stepped out as such. The crowd just yelled itself hoarse. But that was not all, for at the end came the small type tanks and they came down the field as if going into battle. The review over, the president made his way back to the waiting auto. I got back to the barracks somewhat late for dinner, but this time I was not so! (if you know what that means). Steak, mashed potatoes, gravy, coffee, milk and sugar, two bars of chocolate, cigars, etc. Can you imagine me sinking my teeth in all those good things. I forget for the moment that there ever was such a thing like corned Willie, slum, etc. During the evening I cashed my coupon for my Christmas box which was given to each soldier by the Y. M. C. A. A picture show and then to bed. Well, it was some Christmas. I am sorry that I could not be with you to help you make merry, and I hope it is the last that I miss being with you.

Well, I will close with a Happy New Year to you, Ray and the kiddies, and trust to see you before the New Year gets old. Best regards to everybody in Kingston. Love to all dear ones. Love to you, Ray and the kiddies.

Yours,
ABE.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, Jan. 31.—Corporal Louis C. Goodrich came from upper Montclair, New Jersey—where he has been visiting his sister since his discharge from Camp Upton—on Monday to visit friends in Esopus. It is needless to say that he received a joyful welcome. He is looking fine and all are exceedingly glad to greet him once more. Corp. Goodrich returned from overseas about Christmas, he having been the first soldier from Esopus to see service in France.

Another letter and postal was received from Private Daniel Linden on Monday of this week by Mrs. Linden. The letter was written nine days previous to the one which came on Saturday. Among other things he says: We recently took a long hike through Belgium and Luxemburg. The people gave us a glad hand. They have to treat us fine because the United States is behind us. Have lots to tell you—all we saw, all we went through—but it is all over, thank God, and I shall be glad to get home.

Private Graham Bilyou of West Esopus was in town on Monday forenoon, having just arrived from Poughkeepsie. He returned to the U. S. about six weeks ago. Was wounded but is getting along all right now, and his friends are glad to see him back.

We think the following extracts from the letters of Alexander Smith to his wife and daughter will be of interest to his many friends and acquaintances, but we will not answer the "lectures" which perhaps the correspondent will receive when Mr. Smith finds out that they have been published. Mr. Smith sailed for Florida with Judge Alton B. Parker on the Clyde line of steamers in December. His first message—written on the steamer—says "The vessel is loaded with many hundreds of tons of freight and 300 passengers, mostly elderly men and women going down to spend the winter." In a letter dated December 9 he says: "We are to land in Charleston tonight. Shall be glad to see land again, although it has been a nice trip, except last evening. Then we had a very rough sea. Lots of people sea sick. I was not sick but guess I was next door to it. I started to retire. My stateroom is on rear of steamer and when it bobbed up I thought it would never come down again, so I walked to the smoking room and remained there until midnight. In the center of the ship it was not very bad. December 10th the ship pulled out of Charleston at 6 a. m. and anchored until afternoon to give another vessel room to load. The passengers did not enjoy sitting on deck in sight of shore and no way of reaching it. This is a lovely day, weather like Sept. 1st in the north. I notice on the slate that we are to leave at 4 p. m. That will make us twenty-four hours late at Jacksonville. The trip so far has been pleasant except the one night. Sea is calm and as blue as the sky. Sea gulls follow us every day. Wish you were along for I think you would enjoy the trip. We have a good piano on board and "some" players and singers. Dec. 13th. Landed at Jacksonville this afternoon at 2:30. Had a good dinner—each had a whole fresh mackerel and didn't leave any either. Have our tickets and expect to leave for Haines City at 9:30, change for Moore Haven at 4 p. m. Rode in open street car today. Am sitting in shirt sleeves and perspiring freely. Going to take a bath and put on summer clothing. We had some terrible weather just before finishing our journey. Took us forty-four hours to run to Jamestown—they usually make it in fifteen. Had to another three times. Laid all night in the mouth of the St. John's river. The captain said it was the worst for he ever saw. From Moore Haven, where the 1,000 acre tract of land owned by Judge Parker is situated, he writes: Dec. 19th. "We had some sport today. Mrs. O'Brian, the mayor of the city, sent one of her men out here to show us how to hunt wild duck. Well, we sneaked up through the tall grass and soon saw about two hundred, but it was too long a range and we killed only two. Then we went to another pond, fired on a flock and killed fifteen. We came home then as we thought we had enough. Let me know if you hear anything from Lou Goodrich or Dan Linden." Dec. 22nd.—The judge came here last night and he certainly enjoys this weather. We have a good boarding place. They keep cows so we have plenty of good milk, all the eggs we want, green peas, ripe tomatoes and other vegetables. Am going for a wild turkey hunt soon. We're going to have rabbit dinner tomorrow. I went out Saturday—didn't get out of sight of the house—and I'm sure I saw fifty rabbits. They ran in all directions. (If Spot was here she wouldn't get time to go to sleep.) Now I'm going to tell you about another little hunting expedition. Just at dusk on Friday, I walked down in a meadow, looking for rabbit, when all of a sudden there walked along a 24½ pound wild cat. I dropped him, put him over my shoulder and took a lively pace for home. "They say" they won't harm you, but one was enough for me. I suppose in my next letter you would rather have me tell a fish story but you know how fond I am of hunting and it would be hard for me to change. Dec. 24th.—Am going to the post office tonight—3 miles. The right, with influenza and pneumonia, judge went back today. He purchased a large International tractor. We tried it out today and it works fine. This afternoon helped dig sweet potatoes and guavas, gathered green peppers and tomatoes, then cut a great bunch of poinsettias and cannas, the prettiest things I ever saw. The railroad company is surveying for the road to go through by the Lake Shore along the edge of the judge's land. It doesn't look like Xmas here. Very warm indeed. Jan. 17th.—Well, I had my turkey hunt but didn't get any turkey. Did get some quail and had them for breakfast here in the wilderness. We started from Moore Haven after dinner in a "Ford." Went south to the big timber lands. Just before dark we stopped, started a fire, had supper, fixed our beds on the ground and—well, I did not sleep too much as the owls hooted all night and it seemed to me not over ten minutes elapsed between every wild cat yell. Home again and a warm south wind blowing all day. Blows this black smock along like snow. Can hardly see at times and it almost takes you off your feet. They say it is a sure sign of rain, and if that proves true we shall be very glad. Shall be glad when I can come home.

World's Deaf-Mutes.

The amateur student of statistics will find plenty to ponder over in the figures as to the distribution of deafmutes throughout the world. A recent report on this phase of the census of the United States gives the proportion as 42.3 per 100,000, and shows that in the group of countries whose figures is 30 or less all are English-speaking except Holland.—Organist.

DICKMAN COMMENDS Y. M. C. A. WORK

General Order of Commander of Third Division Says It Is Impossible to Express Appreciation of Officers And Men of Comfort And Aid Afforded in Last Hard Weeks of War.

Spread upon the records of the Third Division, A. E. F., and just brought to the attention of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., is a general order issued by command of Major General Dickman, which "Y" officials yesterday hailed as an emphatic answer to charges that Red Triangle workers had avoided the danger zones in France and had wrung exorbitant prices from the soldiers for the comforts which the association had sent overseas. General Dickman directed that a copy of the order be sent to every one of the thirty-four men and six women who went with the division through the fighting at Chateau-Thierry and along the Marne, to St. Mihiel and later into action north of Verdun and along the Meuse. Among the women was Miss Helen Bagoe, of No. 316 West Ninety-fifth street, New York.

The Y. M. C. A. made public General Dickman's order yesterday, along with a communication from Colonel J. C. Rhea of another division which was in the St. Mihiel fighting. Colonel Rhea gave figures showing the large amount of supplies which were distributed in his division by "Y" secretaries without charge. The order of General Dickman, who is now in command of the Army of Occupation in Germany, is as follows:

"The commanding general desires to make a record in the General Orders of this division his appreciation of the part taken by the members of the Y. M. C. A. who have been attached to this division and actively carried on their work in all its phases during the time that this division was in contact with the enemy from May 31 to July 30.

"During the days beginning July 14 when the enemy made their attack and for days and nights afterwards, the Y. M. C. A., through its faithful members at their posts of duty, not only with chocolate and cakes and tobacco cheered our soldiers, but were of efficient assistance to our medical staff in caring for wounded. Hot chocolate was served in many cases, free, both day and night to the wounded and ambulance drivers.

"While the men of the Y. M. C. A. were with the troops in the front line, the young women of the Y. M. C. A. were detailed with the hospitals and medical staff of this division bear testimony of their most efficient help during these two weeks of great strain.

"The conduct of these self-sacrificing and brave men and women who have so unhesitatingly given their services to their country, establishes a standard of prestige, exceptional courage, devotion and resources which the commanding general particularly commends."

Colonel Rhea, chief of staff of the general staff of one of the divisions which helped to straighten out the St. Mihiel salient, wrote to Y. M. C. A. overseas headquarters in Paris as follows:

"The division commander directs me to thank you in the name of the officers and men of this division for your great work in having distributed, gratis to this division, between September 10th and 18th a total of 147,908 packages of cigarettes, 67,540 bars of chocolate; 29,900 packages of cakes; 3,320 pounds of hard candy; and hundreds of gallons of coffee, chocolate and bouillon.

"It is impossible to express to you the appreciation of the officers and men of the pleasure and comfort you have brought to them when each one was struggling under the greatest hardships, to do his duty toward his country. You probably realize better than can be expressed, the appreciation of your kindly work."

Is Your Ice House Filled?

Next summer when the little heat waves are rising from the cornfield and everything is parched and dusty, you're going to be mighty sorry if there isn't any ice in the ice house. No ice cream, no cool drinks, and lots of your milk returned to you. Well, it will be your own fault. You let the winter slip by without harvesting ice. Maybe you planned to do it when the next heavy freeze came. But it never came and you lost your golden opportunity.

This Rooster a Veteran.

The rooster now twisting as a weathercock on the clock tower of the First National bank building in Portland is 130 years old, his first roosting place having been the top of the old courthouse in Portland in 1779. He weighs more than sixty pounds and is said to have been made of oak. Now he shines with a new coat of gilt paint.

Round Robin.

Originally a round robin was a petition or protest signed in such a way that no name headed the list; that is, the signatures were usually placed in circular form. The device is French and the term a corruption of rubd (round) and ruban (a ribbon). It was first adopted by the officers of government as a means of making known their grievances.

INCREASING DEMAND FOR TIMBER OF ELM

Total Stand Placed at Approximately 7½ Billion Feet

Wood Is Desirable Where Strength, Bending Quality and Ability to Withstand Shock Are Concerned—Takes Good Polish.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Elm timber growing in the farm wood lot is a valuable asset.

The demand for elm is increasing, while the supply is rapidly diminishing. It is estimated that the total stand of elm in the United States is approximately 7½ billion feet. This amount would furnish a supply for approximately 30 years at the present rate of cutting, as the annual output of elm lumber is about 24,000,000 board feet, placing elm twelfth in rank among all woods and tenth among hardwoods in point of lumber production.

Elm wood is desirable where strength, bending quality and ability to withstand shocks are required. It is, in general, heavy, hard and strong. The most important use to which it is put, according to the bulletin, is in the cooperage industry, the amount credited to this use being more than twice that of the next in importance, which is in the manufacture of baskets and crates. It is estimated that 147,000,000 board feet are used annually in making cooperage stock or barrels.

Elm is used extensively in making agricultural implements and vehicles also. It is useful in the manufacture of wheels and bodies for automobiles, and the rapid growth of this industry has brought about a considerable increase in the demand for elm. Its ability to take a good polish makes it desirable in the manufacture of certain pieces of furniture, cabinet work and inferior trimmings. It is a fairly durable wood, the average untreated lumber in situations exposed to weather lasting six to eight years. When properly treated with creosote this period may be lengthened to 20 or more years.

RAISE MORE HOGS FOR MEAT

No Farm Is Complete Without Swine to Assist in Modern Methods of Farming.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Meat for the nation and profits for the farmer can be increased by raising hogs. No farm is complete unless some are kept to aid in the modern method of farming. Swine multiply more rapidly than other farm animals and make greater gains per hundred pounds of concentrated feed consumed.

As a consumer of by-products the hog has no rival.

Hogs might be kept profitably upon a number of farms where they are not found today. As a general proposition, it is safer for the average farmer to handle a small number of hogs in connection with his other farm business.

As much feed as possible for hogs should be raised on the farm; no more feed than is absolutely necessary should be purchased.

Hogs weighing from 200 to 300 pounds are in greatest demand on the market, and usually the greatest profit is obtained from selling hogs at these weights. The price realized depends upon the kind of carcass the hog will yield.

RUSSIAN THISTLE OF VALUE

Once Considered Noxious Weed—Now Used for Wintering Stock in New Mexico.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Russian thistle, considered one of the most noxious weeds in New Mexico, is now declared by many stockmen in that section to be of value as a stock feed. Some farmers in Santa Fe county already have put up large stacks of from five to fifty tons to be used for wintering stock this season. Its value as a feed was discovered during the last two years of drought when it was the only thing which stood between the live stock of the ranges and starvation. The county agricultural agent of Santa Fe county is urging the building of silos to be filled with Russian thistles, which, it is also reported, make excellent silage.

WAS NOTHING BUT COLD TEA

Interesting Query Now Is, What Did the "Rakes" of Flushing Think They Were Drinking?

An impressive entry in the influence-of-mind-over-matter contest is submitted by the Flushing correspondent. A prominent turner of an honest penny of Flushing, it seems, with many a sly, knowing and suggestive wink passed the word about that he was now in a position to supply prominent residents of that legally dry district with what he with an air of infinite facetiousness denominated cold tea, to be drunk on the premises.

Prominent rakes of Flushing thronged to the premises at once, a thriving business soon was built up and many a lip was smacked and many a genial jest was exchanged over the so-called cold tea, the consensus of the best opinion being that our turner of an honest penny must have procured for his patrons the private stock of some old Kentucky cellar. Finally one day there came along a phlegmatic, unimaginative fellow who ordered a beaker of cold tea in the accepted important but secretive manner, started to quaff and laid down the tipple with something, we are sorry to say, very like an oath. "Why, that's nothing but cold tea," he exclaimed with kindling anger.

Our turner of an honest penny frankly acknowledged that such in very sooth was the fact and had been the fact in very sooth since the inception of his little venture, smilingly reminding all present that he never had offered them anything but cold tea or sold them the beverage under any other name.

Our prominent rakes of Flushing satisfied that they had been put upon and yet had no recourse, dispersed in no little confusion, thoroughly humiliated, chagrined and ashamed, for such is human nature, because they had been trapped into betraying their unfamiliarity with what it would have served them ill to know.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

NO TIME TO WASTE ENERGY

Western Poet Offers Good Advice When He Says, Forget That Bald Pate for the Present.

Lives there a man with soul so dead that never to himself he's said, when the hair on his pate, once thick, began a-looking thin and sick: "I'll put some dope on that there hair and soon have foliage to spare." Lives there a man who has not spent his last red solitary cent for dope the baldhead druggist said would bring more hair upon his head. Nay. Man seeks the far solitude and rubs his shining pate with crude, or rubs a pint of vaseline each night onto his polished beam, rubs all the dope he can afford on to the thing he calls his gourd then to the druggist doth cavort, and buyeth mange cure by the quart; but all his labor is in vain, he never grows another mane. Man that is born of woman is of few hairs and a funny phiz. He thinketh in his bosch he would look young as he used to be if he could on his poll grown bare contrive another crop of hair. Oh man! O disfurnished gent! don't chase the hair that long has went. That biz is pipeyunish biz. Use all the energy that is, and all of your hair money for the whining of this dreadful war. In this here war game don't you know you should be in the baldhead row.—Judd Mortimer Lewis, in Houston Post.

Hydraulic Cartridges.

It is often difficult and sometimes dangerous to use ordinary explosives for mining and excavating in confined spaces, a fact that has led to the development of the hydraulic mining cartridge.

The cartridge consists of a steel cylinder containing numerous small pistons that move at right angles to the axis of the cylinder and expand when water is injected into them with a hand pump. After drilling a deep enough hole the workmen insert the cylinder and then set to work at the hand pump.

The tiny pistons expand until their free extremities bear against the mass of rock with constantly increasing force and the rock is gradually fractured under tremendous pressure. The operation, it is said, is not only cheaper than the ordinary blast but disintegrates a larger area of rock.

New French Slang.

The language of the Poilu is as double Dutch to the uninitiated. Anyone familiar with the slang of the Quartier Latin would probably feel more at home than most. But there are many other ingredients—some patois, some picked up in Morocco, and some are survivals of the soldier slang of the First empire. Such a word is "cleber," which apparently means to eat after one has been on the point of starving. An explanation given of the origin of the word is that it is a corruption of "kleba," the Russian for bread. It is said that the French soldiers on the great retreat from Moscow called out "Papa, kleba," to Napoleon.

Destroyed Builders' Bills.

Nobody ever will know how much the great palace of Versailles cost France under the reign of its builder, Louis XIV. Louis became badly scared when he received the bills because he had heard a good deal about some disturbers who were whispering that even a king had no right to spend so much money for a palace to house his friends when the nation over which he ruled was starving. So Louis did what many a purchaser of expensive hats has done since—tore up the bills and burned them before anybody could look them over.

Good Advice.

If you're a good citizen you will be more concerned about your contribution to the world than you will be about what the world thinks about it. It's the fellow who can forget what the world may think, in the desire to give the world the best, who really deserves praise. Forget the unkind words and dismiss the slighting acts of people about you. Censor all that you hear for the good that's in it and profit by the result. You will be far more comfortable and the world will hear from you.

Potash in Canada.

The discovery of a large deposit of potash in Saskatchewan is of great national importance to Canada. The only other considerable deposit on this continent, as far as known, is at Searles Lake, in California. This is being developed under the auspices of the American government. The Dominion and Saskatchewan governments should make sure that the new deposits are made productive as soon as possible by the owners.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Always Dictates It.

Booth Tarkington tells of an old negro who appeared as a witness before one of our committees. In the course of his examination these questions were put to the man:

"What is your name?"

"Calhoun Clay, sah."

"Can you sign your name?"

"Sah?"

"I ask if you can write your name."

"Well, no sah. Ah nebber writes mah name. Ah dictates it, sah."

If we are not responsible for the thoughts that pass our doors, we are at least responsible for those we admit and entertain.—Charles B. Newcomb.

EXPECT ACTION ON CREEK BRIDGE

Chamber of Commerce Have Taken Matter Up With Commissioner Duffy and Governor Smith— Definite Information Later.

The Chamber of Commerce has taken up with State Commissioner of Highways Duffy and Governor Smith the matter of letting the contracts for the Sleightsburgh bridge across the Rondout creek. The outlook is favorable, and it is expected that more definite information may be announced shortly.

Kingston needs the Rondout creek bridge, and the local Chamber of Commerce has pointed out this fact to the governor and Commissioner Duffy. There has been considerable delay on the bridge work, partly due, of course, to the big war.

After the War

By CECILLE LANGDON

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

In October Bryce Daniels was invalided from the front on account of wounds and illness. A month to a day later he reached New York city. Bells were ringing, whistles shrieking, bands playing madly to celebrate a great event. The war was over and his medals of bravery and advancement to a lieutenancy were evidences of his effective participation in the world conflict.

There was the constant picture of father, mother, home and Winnie in his mind as he sped west on a train with Franklin his native town the destination in view. Winsome Winnie Bryce was included in the group because he had been very near to a declaration of love when they had parted after his enlistment. Then, too, she had corresponded regularly with him, and the months in the trenches had been pleasantly punctuated with gifts of sweaters, comforts, outfits, boxes of fudge and the like. So Bryce had made up his mind when he got home to nurse his love if Winnie was receptive, which he fully believed her to be and in which conjecture he was eminently correct.

There was a delirious welcome of the hero, son and brother, in which the whole town shared. Winnie was proud and happy when he singled her out as his "chief" girl companion amid the festive social functions of his first week. The edge of a vague cloud somewhat shadowed the sunny sky of her life when Bryce accidentally dropped a photograph from his pocket. Her brother had found it and had returned it to Bryce, but not until Winnie had a sight of it.

The photo was one of "Nina Lefere" taken in France, and presented a jaunant, expressive face. The eyes were soulful, the smile soft and winning. A sudden pang of jealousy assailed Winnie. She had heard of soldiers' sweethearts abroad and wondered if this was some casual flame of her knight errant, whose sole undivided affection she craved. She longed to ask Bryce about this mysterious lady, but could not bring herself to do so. What right had she to question the preference of one who had in no wise committed himself as to his especial interest in her? She was to a degree somewhat constrained in manner and Bryce noticed it. He was determined to learn his fate. It was a clear autumn day when air, sky and earth suggested early fall rather than November, and they were seated on the steps of the porch when he turned his face towards her, ardent and glowing. Instantly Winnie felt that a declaration was on his lips, when there was an interruption.

A great shaggy dog had suddenly bounded over the fence lifted his head, uttered a resonant bay of delight, ran towards Bryce and leaped upon him bodily. The animal all but caressed Bryce who, with a cry of incredulity, exclaimed:

"Vantrim! the ambulance pet of the battalion. Why, how did he ever come here? Winnie, it is one of the dogs I have told you so much about."

Bryce sprang to his feet. Entering the gate was a comrade of the front who rushed towards him with outstretched arms, seizing him, kissing him first on one cheek and then on the other.

"Bon camarade!" exulted the dapper effusive Frenchman. "Is it wonder at seeing him here? Ah! I have sought you purposely and—behold!" and there came forward, all smiles and dazzling eyed, the original of the photograph, the mysterious Nina Lefere.

She extended both hands and caught those of Bryce in a fervent clasp. Winnie's heart sank at the palpable demonstrations of full affection.

"Ah, the young lady!" spoke Pierre Du Bois abruptly. "Tell her of us and I will tell more." And Bryce introduced his old comrade.

"The mademoiselle no longer," interrupted Du Bois. "My wife, dear lady," and a great burden was lifted from the mind of Winnie.

And then the story came out of Nina Lefere, a refugee crossing the lines and telling of her father, held captive in a near town in Belgium in the hands of the enemy, awaiting a rescue of brave Bryce and some comrades effecting his rescue; of Du Bois later going to the town to unearth the buried treasure of the diamond merchant, and now—

"See?" cried the volatile Frenchman, "it is her father, now at New York. And because Nina loved me, she consented to wed me, and because you rescued him and I later secured for him his treasure, he has made me rich and sent me hither to bestow upon you as well a full share of reward for your brave, kindly service."

And now the sun emerged brighter than ever from behind the dark cloud Winnie had feared. And when the visitors had been comfortably bestowed in the Leslie home, Bryce ran down to Winnie to tell her that he had "forgotten something."

What he had forgotten was to tell her that he loved her. And as they stood at the garden gate, and Winnie flutteringly whispered to Bryce Daniels what he so longed to hear, the moon came forth radiant, glorious, as it always should when happy lovers plight their troth!

FOUND OLD INDIAN VILLAGE

Interesting Relics, Believed to Be Centuries Old, Recently Unearthed in New York State.

Relics of an Indian village, said to have its origin as early as 1575, have been discovered in Clason Point, the Bronx, according to an announcement made by the Museum of the American Indian Heye foundation. The discovery was made by Alan P. Skinner, archeologist of the foundation. The discovery is regarded as a very important one by the members of the foundation. Research establishes that the village was probably inhabited by natives of the Siwanoy tribe, known to very early settlers as "Snakeskins."

The research, made through the kindness of a trustee of the foundation, has established to the satisfaction of the board that the tract remained in possession of its Indian inhabitants until 1625, when it was purchased by Robert Cornell, an Englishman. Cornell's family was later massacred by the barbarian tribe. During the attack he managed to make his escape on a Dutch ship.

Mr. Skinner was making a pleasure trip through Clason Point, which is somewhat of a summer resort, last July. He noticed very large oyster shells on a mound of sand and recognized them as Indian boundary line markings. He obtained permission from the owner of the land to make a search of the ground. To the surprise of the searchers, relics of Indian life were unearthed. Costumes, beads, cooking utensils and a complete hair dress of the Siwanoy tribe were discovered. Seventy lodge sites, containing hundreds of Indian implements and tools, were also dug up.

The collection contained crude harpoons, fishhooks, carved tortoise-shell cups, bodkins and decorated pottery. Hundreds of pipes and a beautiful mold jar were discovered intact, and all are being preserved for public exhibition when the museum opens. This history speaks of the Siwanoy practice of digging sand holes and placing large quantities of food and other offerings to the "Great Snake." It was announced at the museum that the relics will be placed on exhibition at the opening of the exhibit.

Opportunity Missed.

For several years it had been my custom to make a visit on Thanksgiving afternoon at the home of my most particular friend. This last Thanksgiving I missed, as the family was to attend the community singing at 4 p. m. A few days after Ilie Katherine dropped in to see me and asked "Why didn't you come to see us on Thanksgiving?"

"Well," I replied, "you were not at home in the afternoon."

She then asked: "Why didn't you come earlier? Why not come for dinner?"

"But," I jokingly replied, "you didn't ask me!"

"Well," she replied cheerfully, "I think if you'd come early and hung around they'd have asked you!"—Chicago Tribune.

Awaiting Instructions.

In a letter received from a comrade of mine, who is a lieutenant in the aviation service, he tells of the following incident that happened to a cadet flyer at Kelly field: The cadet was making his first solo flight and had been flying around the towers where the instructors sit and observe the movements of the solo flyers, when he was seen throwing something out of his plane. He had thrown his shoe out with a note tied to it saying that his "gun" or gas throttle was jammed, and he didn't know what to do. He flew around the towers ten times before he realized that he had a magneto switch on his plane that would shut off the ignition and thus stop the engine. He finally landed with a dandy "thump."—Chicago Tribune.

Conscience.

It was plain to be seen that Arthur, eight years old, had something on his mind. It was something that concerned Christmas and his neighbor, Jimmy. Finally he said to his mother:

"I guess I'll give Jimmy his knife for Christmas."

"Have you Jimmy's knife?" the mother inquired.

"Yes, I found it a long time ago. He thinks it's lost. But findin's keepin's, you know."

The mother made no comment, for she knew something else was coming. And then her son said:

"I might as well give it to him. I can't use it 'cause he's with me all the time."

Wheat Production.

Mean wheat production per acre in the 15 years, 1899-1913, was 42.5 bushels in Denmark, 33.4 bushels in Ireland, 32.1 bushels in Belgium, 31.5 bushels in Great Britain, 29.7 bushels in Germany, 20.2 bushels in France, 19.1 bushels in Austria, 18.1 bushels in Hungary, 16.7 bushels in Roumania, and 14.1 bushels in the United States. Bushels of measure are taken for Denmark, France, Great Britain, Ireland and Roumania; of 60 pounds for the other countries.

Family Prayers.

Nurse—James, did you know the angels have sent you another little brother?

James—Oh, brother; just as I don't have enough folks to pray for every night as it is.

Wasting Light.

A lighting expert say that about $500,000,000 worth of light is wasted every year in this country through failure to keep windows, globes, reflectors and other light sources free from dust and dirt. The lighting bill for the nation is about $500,000,000, and if this expert is right, we are wasting two-fifths of this.

C. OF C. CONSIDERS SEVERAL MATTERS

Several important matters were taken up at the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce held on Thursday afternoon Among matters considered was the decision to urge the trolley road to abolish the skip-stop system of operating trolley cars; a resolution pledging the support of the chamber to the officials of the coming auto show to be held here in March and offering the services of the secretary and office facilities of the chamber.

The board also went on record as favoring a minimum of three months' pay for each discharged soldier from the date of his discharge, and will recommend that action to the government. It is expected that similar action will be taken by other Chambers of Commerce throughout the state

The board will later appoint a committee on retail trade, and the appointment of a special committee on the barge canal terminal was authorized to support Senator Walton's bill appropriating money for the construction of canal terminals. The board also favored taking up the matter of making Kingston a port of entry and authorized the appointment of a special committee to take the matter up

The board discussed the desirability of congressional action to secure prompt payment to government contractors on war production and to validate beyond question all contracts entered into in good faith and voted in favor of urging immediate legislation to cover the matter.

A special committee was appointed to confer with Mrs. W. A Warren, chairman of the Home Economies Association with respect to he most effective means of co-operation

What Has the War Taught?

Dr Baragwanath, pastor of the St. James Church, will speak on the above topic on Sunday night at the popular service The great war opened the eyes of the world to many things. Well, what have we learned from such an experience that is unprecedented? Will all the dreadful struggle and sacrifice have been in vain? We have learned not only how to raise and provision an army, and how to fight to win a glorious victory over the well-organized foe, but there have been other and higher lessons taught. They should be well learned by us and the world Next Sunday night Dr. Baragwanath will speak on "Lincoln, the Colossal Figure of History."

Modified Form of Slavery.

There is no legal and formal slavery in any Christian country. It survives in a mild form in most Mohammedan countries. The peonage system of Latin-American countries is not much different from slavery, but rests upon a different theory. The peon is not supposed to be owned as property; he is supposed to be working to pay a debt which he owes the master.

ICEMEN HOPE FOR COLDER WEATHER

With the sun shining, snow flurries filled the air this morning, and the weather a trifle colder than it has been for the past week or so, icemen are hoping that there will be a further drop in the temperature.

Unless there is a decided change in the weather, prospects for harvesting a crop of ice from the Hudson river are dubious. Local ice dealers are not worrying much over the ice harvest as yet, as the majority take their supply from the small lakes and ponds in this vicinity. At the Rinnewaters the ice is seven inches thick, but will not be harvested yet on the chance that it may thicken

"BROKEN ALABASTER BOXES."

His theme Thursday evening was "The Constraining Power of Love." "The highest principle of the world is love," he said "When Alexander the Great wanted to conquer the world, he mustered his forces and blood flowed like a river, and poor Alexander when he died was a conquered wretch When Napoleon wanted to conquer the world he mustered his forces and all Europe was drenched in blood, but he died a defeated wretch at St. Helena When Jesus Christ wanted to conquer the earth He looked at it walked to Calvary, and laid down his life for it, and today millions would die for Him."

Evangelist Pugsley is a forceful and eloquent speaker, and the services have a snap and swing to them The music is good, and there is not a dull moment during the evening. The evangelist believes in opening and closing promptly on time

Noted Men Who Escaped Captivity by Subterfuge.

In Hours of Grave Danger Soldiers of Proved Bravery Have Not Hesitated to Save Lives by Ignominious Flight.

Gen. Hans von Beseler of the German army is said to have escaped out of Poland in disguise as a stowaway on board a Vistula river steamboat. In the fall of 1914 Von Beseler was glorified as the conqueror of the city of Antwerp, the chief stronghold of Belgium and the chief port of continental Europe. Germany's conquering heroes of 1914 have been vanquished and Von Beseler is but one of a great company of notable fugitives who have saved their lives by fleeing in disguise. Judge Jeffries of English history, whose name is associated with the "bloody assizes," tried to hide himself and escape the vengeance his savage cruelty merited by donning the garb of a coal miner and hiding in a tavern at Woking, but he was recognized, captured, imprisoned in the Tower of London, where he soon died. Prince Charles Edward Stuart, pretender to the throne of Great Britain, escaped from Scotland in petticoats, disguised as Betty Burke, maid to Flora MacDonald. Louis Phillippe, the "citizen king" of France, fled to the coast of Normandy where he posed as "Mr. Smith," a British subject, in order to secure passage to England on a steamboat. Napoleon III, while a pretender to the throne of France, was imprisoned in the fortress of Ham. After several months of confinement repairs were begun on the fortress. Napoleon bribed one of the carpenters to smuggle in a workman's garb for his disguise. He dressed himself in the course overalls and blouse, shouldered a short plank, which he carried on edge so as to conceal his face, and walking past his guard he escaped to Belgium and thence to England. Porfirio Diaz was twice compelled to flee from Mexico and seek safety in the United States. He made one trip from New Orleans to Vera Cruz disguised as a stoker on board a steamship and was soon leading a new band of revolutionists Empress Eugenie, disguised as a servant woman, was taken out of Paris by Doctor Evans, an American dentist, in whose house she had been hidden. Thus she escaped the blind fury of the French mob and gained safe asylum in England. Jefferson Davis, fallen president of the Southern Confederacy, is said by his enemies to have tried to escape out of the country and evade his pursuers disguised in woman's garb, but he was captured and imprisoned until the passions of some of the northern firebrands had cooled.

The General's Drop.

I have been told this story of a "flying" general, who has had experience as a parachutist, says a writer in the London Evening News. A few days ago he was a passenger in an airplane going north. After a while he picked up a village where he intended to stop for a day or two, and informed the pilot, who at once signalled his intention of making a landing. "Why don't stop?" shouted the general, and he proceeded to attach himself to a parachute and his suitcase to another. He dropped the case overboard and then stepped off himself. General and suitcase floated down gently and safely to earth, while the airplane continued its flight.

Comfortable Beds.

Mattress and pillow used in the berths of sailors and firemen aboard government-operated merchant vessels are of the most approved type for sea use, for besides making good bedding, they are the best sort of life preservers. Their filling is a soft, resilient tropical fiber known as kapoc, which can sustain 25 times its own weight in salt water for 48 hours

On each of the new merchant ships built under the direction of the United States shipping board, shower baths are provided for the crew, there being one for the firemen, and another for the deck force.—Merchant Marine.

Kaiser's Thankless Dentist.

"Now that Doctor Davis has finished his revelations," says Nate Saulsbury, as reported by the Chicago Evening Post, "the kaiser may realize how sharper than an ulcerated tooth it is to have a thankless dentist. We should like to have held the doctor's job and, when it appeared necessary to draw the kaiserlische molar, warbled as we closed down on the forceps. 'The yanks are coming, the yanks are coming!'"—From Outlook.

An Awful Waste.

"When a senator dies at least eight thousand volumes of eulogy are printed and distributed by the government," said Professor Pate. "This is an appalling waste, and—"

"It is indeed," replied J. Fuller Gloom. "In most instances three cheers would be more appropriate.—Kansas City Star.

The Right Sort.

Two Aucklanders were talking about a mutual friend. Said one: "So Jim has gone into the navy and is now on a destroyer. I thought he was a pacifist."

"He is: a naval pacifist."

"And what is naval pacifist?"

"One who plants depth bombs for the purpose of spreading oil on the troubled waters."

Shakespeare Stands Alone.

Admitting to the fullest that the present age cannot forestall the judgment of posterity, it seems unlikely that a copy of the work of any contemporary dramatist will ever sell for $28,000. Such a thing happened recently in the case of four Shakespeare folios; but Shakespeare was Shakespeare, even when his contemporaries took him as a matter of course, and since then the judgment of time has made him a standard by which the enduring genius of later playwrights can be reasonably estimated.

The London Times.

The London Times was founded on January 1, 1788, by John Walter, who started a small newspaper, originally called The Daily Universal Register, the first number of which was issued on January 1, 1785. This was really, though not in name, the first number of The Times. The 940th number, which appeared on January 1, 1788, was for the first time entitled The Times, or Daily Universal Register, but the second title was dropped on March 15 of that year, since which the paper has been known as The Times.

Danger Everywhere.

Little Millie's father and grandfather were Republicans, and an election drew near. They spoke of their opponents with ever increasing warmth, never heeding Millie's attentive ears. One night as the little maid was preparing for bed she cast a fearful glance across the room and whispered in a frightened little voice: "Oh, mamma, I'm afraid to go to bed. I'm afraid there's a Democrat in the closet."—Organizer.

"Side Line" All Right.

Those women who can do something should not be ashamed to be up and doing it. There is a dignity attached to all honest labor, no matter how ordinary or commonplace it may be, and those of us who are qualified to help out at home will feel better and stronger—providing, of course, our family will in no way suffer as a result—to be up and at our honest little "side line."—New York Evening Telegram.

Seagulls Foretell Weather.

It is a widespread belief, both in Scotland and in Wales, that "Seagull, seagull, sit on the sand, it's never good weather while you're on the land," alludes to the fact that when the birds fly out early and far to seaward, or remain on the sand, fair weather may be looked for; while if they take a contrary course storms most frequently follow.

How Her Limitations.

Edward's highest ambition was to some day be an engineer. He delighted in the workings of his electrical engines, and one day he undertook to explain the various parts to Janet. She listened indifferently and finally he became exasperated and said: "Oh, well, go on and play. I don't suppose you will ever be anything more than a mother, anyway."

Good Ends Require Good Means.

Let no man turn aside, ever so slightly, from the broad path of honor, on the plausible pretense that he is justified by the goodness of his end. All good ends can be worked out by good means. Those that cannot are bad; and may be counted so at once, and left alone.—Charles Dickens in "Barnaby Rudge."

Mother's Poor "Remember."

Mother had been searching for her purse. Having found it she shortly afterwards mislaid her eyeglasses and asked Doris, who was playing nicely with Kitty, to hunt for them. Doris promptly obeyed, but said: "You is always losing something, mummy; I wish to goodness you had as good a remember as nanny has."

Good Speaking.

Discretion in speech is more than eloquence; and to speak agreeably to him with whom we deal is more than to speak in good words or in good order.—Bacon.

Raining "Cats and Dogs."

In England the male blossoms of the willows are called "cats and dogs" and a rainstorm would shake them off and strew them on the ground. Hence arose the expression "raining cats and dogs."

Columbus Boasted.

"These latest passengers needn't be so stuck up," he cried. "I was the first man to crow the ocean in three ships."—New York Sun.

Bobby's Version.

Asked to define "lunch," Bobby replied: "Lunch is what you have for dinner when your father is away."
